There are often different versions of the same songs used by other circles and groups. However, we have included only the ones we use in our Circle. The songs are in Mi'Kmaq and other languages. Some were passed on to us long before there was a written version. They have been sung from generation to generation and are another of our connections to the ancestors.

English Translation

Let us greatly respect our being L'nu
My people let us gather
Let us greatly respect our native roots
My people let us help one another
Let us help one another as Creator intended when he put us on this earth

What we know about the Strong Woman Song:

“That’s actually an old song. It was a social song that was sung at Round Dances. I stand to be corrected but this is what I was told: Maggie Paul, an elder from Saskatchewan, brought the song into the women’s penitentiary and taught it to them. She spent a lot of time with them, keeping them connected to their culture, music and whatnot. It had another title at the time but what I guess had happened is that there were riots and ... things were going on in the women’s prison. They were being raped and ridiculed and all this sort of stuff (by the prison guards). What happened is that a group of women basically stepped together and sang that song continuously while this was happening and they were left untouched. I guess this secret energy came over them and that is how the song become known as “The Strong Woman’s Song.”
